

Spitfire is a value-oriented investor in publicly-traded, generally smaller capitalization companies. We invest in market share leading businesses which generate excess cash, possess substantial financial flexibility and demonstrate increasing intrinsic value. Our investments offer the potential for significant upside over a multi-year holding period while benefitting from a substantial margin of safety. Most of our targets are underfollowed by sell side analysts and institutional investors and are often attractive acquisition candidates. Since inception, fifteen companies, representing approximately 25% of our investments, have been acquired by strategic or financial buyers.

CURRENT MONTH PERFORMANCE

In December, The Spitfire Fund L.P. was down -4.6% (net), which compares with the Russell 2000 and S&P 500 which were down -5.0% and -1.6%, respectively. For the full year, the Fund was down -0.7% (net), versus the Russell 2000 and S&P 500 which were down -4.4% and up +1.4%, respectively. Since inception, the Fund is up +145.9% (net), ahead of the Russell 2000 and S&P 500 which are up +53.0% and +63.4%, respectively. December was a frustrating month in which we gave back our year to date gains and ended the year with a modest loss, our first since 2008. This is a very disappointing result for us. During the month, Steelcase (NYSE: SCS) reported poor fiscal third quarter results, which resulted in a -25% stock price decline. A bright spot was the announcement of the acquisition of Jarden (NYSE: JAH) by Newell Rubbermaid Corporation (NYSE: NWL), which will be the sixteenth acquisition of a portfolio company when closed in the second quarter.
