

Centaur Value Fund

Information as of April 30, 2012

Fund Strategy & Investment Philosophy

The Centaur Value Fund employs a value-oriented, long-biased strategy with a goal of generating attractive absolute returns over rolling 3-5 year periods with relatively low risk. The Fund typically holds 25-35 long ideas and 10-15 short ideas, with the top ten long ideas routinely comprising 40-60% of the Fund's assets. The Fund is long-biased, with maximum potential long exposure of 125% and net exposures typically ranging from 50-75%.

The Advisor of the Fund employs a rigorous investment process that emphasizes in-depth, bottoms-up research and disciplined risk management practices. Investment ideas are selected based on fundamental research with an emphasis on cash flow, asset value, and earnings capacity. Ideas are not limited by market cap size, sector, country, or other "style box" categories, though most Fund investments tend to be North American companies or securities traded on U.S. exchanges. While ideas are most often expressed through investments in common stock, the Fund also utilizes options on certain ideas where a more attractive risk / reward relationship is identified. The Fund historically has not used leverage.

The Fund's short sale strategy emphasizes shorting as a profit-making activity, with hedging considered only a beneficial side-effect. The Fund limits total short positions to 40% of Fund assets plus a maximum of 5% of additional Fund assets that may be used to purchase put options. The Fund is not managed to any volatility targets, but rather is managed to limit the potential for permanent capital loss. The Advisor makes no attempt to control monthly or quarterly performance and does not consider short-term performance to be especially meaningful in evaluating the Fund's success.
